KITCHEN UPGRADE / ALTERNATIVES GUIDE

5 Alternatives to the Ninja 700W Slim Blender & Smoothie Maker (Including Bigger, More Versatile Options)

Best alternatives to the Ninja 700W Slim Blender: compare bigger, hotter, and more versatile Ninja and Kenwood options for UK kitchens.

£52.68 ~~RRP £59.99~~ Save £7.31 (12%)

★★★★☆ 4.7/5 (5670 reviews)

Lowest Price | 1000+ bought/month

Products Featured in This Guide

Ninja Foodi Blender & Soup Maker, 10 Auto-iQ Programs, 1.7L Glass Jug, Hot & Col...

£129.99 4.7★

Ninja 700W Slim Blender & Smoothie Maker, 2x 470ml Cups with Spout Lids, Persona...

£52.68 4.7★

Aucma Stand Mixer, 6.2L Food Mixers for Baking, Electric Kitchen Mixers with Bow...

£99.99 4.6★

Ninja 3-in-1 Food Processor & Blender with 5 Automatic Programs: Blend, Max Blen...

£149.00 4.6★

Ninja 2-in-1 Blender with 3 Automatic Programs Blend, Max Blend, Crush, and 4 Ma...

£120.00 4.7★

Kenwood, MultiPro Go FDP22.130GY, Food Processor, for Chopping, Slicing, Gratin...

£49.00 4.6★

The closest like-for-like upgrade is the Ninja 2-in-1 Blender BN750UK. Compared with the 700W Slim Blender, it's much more powerful at 1200W and comes with both a 2.1L jug and a 700ml cup, so it suits everything from single smoothies to family-sized batches. It's better if you want frozen fruit, crushed ice, or thicker blends with less effort. The downside is the bigger footprint and higher price, so it takes up more precious UK worktop space. Choose this if you like the idea of one appliance doing quick personal drinks and larger blends too.

The Ninja 3-in-1 Food Processor & Blender BN800UK is the best pick if your kitchen needs go beyond smoothies. It adds a food processor bowl alongside the jug and cup, making it brilliant for chopping veg, making dips, purees, and even mixing dough. At 1200W, it's a serious step up in versatility and performance. What's worse is the price and the extra parts to store and wash, so it's not as neat as the slim personal blender. This is ideal for busy home cooks who want one machine to replace several.

If you want hot and cold blending, the Ninja Foodi Blender & Soup Maker HB150UK is a standout alternative. Its built-in heating element means you can make soup straight in the jug, then blend smoothies and sauces too. It's better for winter cooking and batch prep, and the 1.7L glass jug feels more premium. However, it's far larger and much pricier than the QB3001UKS, and it doesn't have the same grab-and-go cup convenience. Choose this if you want more of a countertop soup-and-smoothie station than a simple personal blender.

The Kenwood MultiPro Go FDP22.130GY is a smart budget-friendly option if you're more interested in prep work than drinks. At £49, it undercuts the Ninja and is great for chopping, slicing, grating, and pureeing, with a compact 1.3L bowl and 650W motor. It's better value for everyday food prep, but it won't replace a proper smoothie maker for icy drinks or on-the-go blending. This suits smaller kitchens and cooks who need a compact processor rather than a blender.

Finally, the Aucma 6.2L Stand Mixer is the alternative for bakers, not smoothie fans. It's not a blender at all, but if your real goal is cakes, bread, whisking, and dough, this offers a huge bowl and proper mixing power for the money. It's better for batch baking and weekend loaf-making, but useless for frozen fruit drinks. Pick this instead if your kitchen priority is baking rather than blending.

Overall, the Ninja QB3001UKS still makes sense if you want a slim, affordable, no-fuss personal blender for smoothies, shakes, and crushed ice without giving up much worktop space.

Still Buy the Original If...

Buy the original if you mainly want a compact personal blender for one or two smoothies a day and like the convenience of the two 470ml cups. It’s still one of the best-value options for simple, reliable blending in a small UK kitchen.

Read the full review with live prices and price history at allthetoppicks.com

Published by Kitchen Upgrade • allthetoppicks.com • April 2026

Prices and availability may have changed since publication. Always check the latest prices before purchasing.